Many training and development initiatives bring only limited return because organizations fail to make the connection between people, performance, and strategy execution. Studies by leading industry analysts show that now more than ever, organizations need true Human Performance Improvement solutions that align proven content, innovative technology, and world-class services in order to make a business difference.

“We are very pleased that Caterpillar has chosen to join the growing list of Fortune 500 organizations using our offerings and services,” says Gene Leveille, Executive Vice President Sales, Wilson Learning Corporation. “We look forward to supporting this new relationship.”
